Pros and cons for the introduction of a Swiss substantive Trust Law

Hosted by David Wallace Wilson, Partner at Schellenberg Wittmer, law firm in Geneva.

David Wallace Wilson

David is a partner in Schellenberg Wittmer's Private Client practice in Geneva. Schellenberg Wittmer is one of the leading business law firms in Switzerland with over 130 lawyers in Zurich and Geneva.

David advises individuals worldwide on all aspects of wealth structures and tax planning for their personal and business assets. He is specialised in matrimonial and succession issues, trusts and other vehicles. He also administers cross-border estates and is involved in family disputes and mediation. His additional areas of expertise include anti-money laundering.

David serves, as officer of STEP Geneva (since 2004) and as board member of the Swiss Advanced Certificate in Trust Management (since 2007) and as a Presiding Judge of the STEP Private Client Awards (2011 & 2012). He is a contributor to Glasson's International Trust Laws, the editor of the leading website dedicated to trusts in Switzerland – www.trusts.ch – and a contributing editor to the Trust Quarterly Review. Furthermore, he is frequently quoted in the specialised press and lectures extensively (e.g. Geneva University's Banking & Finance LL.M., Offshore Tax Planning Conference, Swiss Federal Attorney General and numerous professional bodies).
